Driver Workload Assessor

The Driver Workload Assessor has the responsibility of estimating the workload to which the driver is currently subject and providing this assessment to other system components that need this information to manage the HMI in a manner that does not overload the driver. Typically this information will be used by any HMI control components (Application Manager, Pop-up Manager, OEM HMI control software) but may also be used directly by applications to moderate their style or timing of interaction with the driver according to workload.